Building the

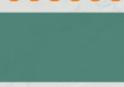

Mountains to Sound Greenway National Heritage Area

“In 1990, 80 people marched from Snoqualmie Pass to Puget Sound – they called for the public protection of the natural beauty of the I-90 corridor. Since then collaborative efforts by many co-authors have created, and continue to build, a connected Greenway landscape across the Cascades from Ellensburg in Central Washington to the shores of Puget Sound in Seattle. The Mountains to Sound Greenway is a national success story. Greenway partners have worked together for over three decades to achieve a vision of accessible natural areas, livable communities, productive working lands, and incomparable scenic beauty. If we sustain a commitment to ongoing protection and maintenance, this historic landscape can help define a treasured quality of life in the region for generations to come.”
